Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to board games and other diversions for entertaining children, and more particularly to such games and diversions which include a board having a plurality of playing pieces used by the children to play games by making moves on the board. 2. Description of the Related Art Children's games in which the children play on a game board having game pieces have been known for many years. Numerous games using dice or similar game pieces are well known, and a variety of other games are also known in which the board includes a game board and game pieces used to play games on the game board by moving the game pieces on the board. For example, the game of Bingo is played using a 5.times.5 game board and 25 playing pieces, each of which comprises a circular tag bearing a letter from the alphabet. The player who has the most complete row when all of his or her 25 pieces have been "called" by the other players is declared the winner. Likewise, on a game board having a 5.times.5 playing square which includes a plurality of 5.times.5 playing areas, each of which may be divided into
